Hackers can take control of your computer's webcam

In the 'always on' modern age, it should come as no surprise that your computer's webcam might be on too, only without your knowledge. According to Engadget, this issue is so widespread that even the former director of the FBI, James Comey, recommended that everyone cover their webcams with tape to prevent being spied upon unaware. It might be easy to dismiss the comment as paranoid, but even high-profile Facebook founder Mark Zuckerberg has also been seen taping his laptop's camera and microphone.

There are many ways for a webcam's security to be compromised and one of the easiest is to use Remote Administration Tools (RATs) to take control of an entire system. These tools weren't created to cause mayhem, but by installing them on unwitting users through email attachments, nefarious websites, and other methods, hackers can gain full access to an entire computer while leaving no trace.

To make matters worse, some hackers have discovered that they don't have to do much at all to gain access to various webcams that have faulty or buggy software. In recent history, cameras used in home security and baby monitors have merely required a remote user to know the public IP address of the camera to gain control without even having to input a password. It is important to research any security cameras you're thinking of purchasing to look for any inherent flaws or weaknesses that could be exploited.

There are things a user can do to avoid being spied on through their devices. In addition to covering the camera, be sure to use a reliable antivirus scanner at all times and keep it up to date. Keeping operating systems, browsers, and other general software up to date is also crucial so that hackers can't gain access through unpatched vulnerabilities. As always, avoid clicking any links that you aren't entirely sure are legitimate and be wary of any email attachments that you weren't expecting.

Women's History Month: Sister adventurers unlock the past

As the 19th century ended, European woman were expected to learn to read, sew, and perhaps if their station merited it, speak a little conversational French.

According to Janet Soskice, author of The Sisters of Sinai, twin sisters Agnes and Margaret Smith were part of this era and profoundly separate from it. Raised with a boy's education, the sisters mastered five languages in childhood and kept their own counsel -- traveling widely even without a male chaperone, marrying late in life, and causing some scandal with their insistence on exercising in their yard, clad in their bloomers. But the sisters also electrified British academia and the world with their breathtaking 1892 camel caravan to Africa where they visited the ancient mountaintop monastery of St. Catherine's and there identified and photographed one of the oldest Gospels ever found.

The sisters had no degrees, no titles, no breathless support from academics. Their extraordinary adventures -- bolstered by the Presbyterian principle that one must do something worthwhile with one's life -- were to rock British society.

They were well prepared. Having studied the extant Bible texts, the sisters learned to speak Greek, Arabic and Syriac in preparation for their trek. From other researchers they had learned of a dark closet at St. Catherine's filled with ancient texts. It was there that Agnes Smith identified and photographed the manuscript.

What to do in an eye emergency

Specks in the Eye

- Don't rub the affected eye.
- Flush the eye with lots of water.
- See a doctor if the speck doesn't wash out.

Cuts, Punctures, and Foreign Objects in the Eye

- Don't try to remove a foreign object stuck in the eye.
- Seek immediate medical attention.

Chemical Burns

-Immediately flush the eye with water or drinkable liquid. Open the eye as wide as possible. Continue flushing for at least 15 minutes, even on your way to seeking medical care.

-If a contact lens is in the eye, begin flushing over the lens immediately. Flushing may dislodge the lens.

- Seek immediate medical attention.

Blows to the Eye

-Apply a cold compress without pressure, or tape crushed ice in a plastic bag to the forehead and allow it to rest gently on the injured eye.

-Seek immediate medical attention if pain continues, if you have reduced vision, or if blood or discoloration appears in the eye.

"Just a handful or you'll spoil your dinner."

Thanks a Bunch!

Thank you! So great to walk into a very clean home after being gone for almost two weeks.

Celebrate St. Patrick's Day with a new take on an Irish favorite

The origins of the Reuben sandwich are widely contested, but it is certain that many a palate has savored the rich deli taste of the corned beef, Swiss cheese and sauerkraut-laden stack.

One story related to famed chef Craig Claiborne, by Patricia Taylor, contends that her father, Arnold Reuben, made the first Reuben sandwich in 1927 or 1928 in his New York deli. It was actually rye, ham, and Swiss cheese with a topping of coleslaw and Russian dressing.

Reuben Kulakofsky, a wholesale grocer and restaurateur in Omaha, made the sandwich for his poker buddies and it later appeared on the menu of the Blackstone Hotel.

While the Reuben sandwich could be Jewish or Nebraska homegrown in origin, corned beef is an Irish staple for celebrating St. Patrick's Day.

Irish Reuben Casserole

- 3 cups toasted pumpernickel bread cut into one-inch cubes
- 1 pound corned beef deli slices or slices from a boiled slab
- 12 slices Swiss deli cheese
- 1 cup sauerkraut
- 1 bottle Thousand Island dressing for garnish or condiment

Layer the bottom of a large rectangular glass baking dish with half the cubes of toasted Pumpernickel.

Layer six slices of the Swiss cheese on top. Next, add a layer of the corned beef and another layer of Swiss cheese.

Spread the sauerkraut evenly over the top of the Swiss cheese layer and spread the remaining toasted cubes of bread on the top. Bake at 350 degrees until the top layer of bread becomes firm and crusty.

Drizzle the dressing lightly across the top and place a bowl of it on the table as a condiment. Green Goddess dressing can be substituted as the drizzle for a St. Paddy's Day touch.

Answers to 'The Magic Touch'

How to choose a dog

- Try an older dog. You will not only save a life, but you will get a loving, grateful companion without high-energy puppy behaviors.

- Size counts. Vets used to say you should never get a dog you can't lift onto an exam table. Still, if you have a large secure yard, a larger dog could offer some home security. But make sure you have the space to accommodate a larger dog. If not, go small. Avoid small dogs that are highly active, like Jack Russell Terriers.

- Consider grooming. Some might really enjoy fussing over their pet's coat and taking the little fella to the groomer. But it's not for everyone. Short haired dogs are lots of fun and less trouble.

- Consider the dog's future. If you are going to get a dog, have some sort of plan in place for the dog's future. If you become disabled, what will happen to the dog?

Put retirement before future college funding

It is more important to securely fund retirement accounts than to save heavily for a child's college education, according to USA Today. This might sound selfish to those who think preparing their kids for the future is a more noble goal. But, in fact, it is wise. While children can take out student loans to pay for college, it is unlikely that parents can finance their way through retirement.

College students have many options to pay for their education and having a fully funded savings account might tempt the family to place less importance on free grants and scholarships that will often require more work up front but don't have to be paid back.

Cold or flu, take these basic steps

To stop the spread of cold or flu in the household, take these precautions:

- Isolate toothbrushes from others. Replace the brush when the person is well.
- Thoroughly clean humidifiers. You don't want them throwing around viruses.
- Sleep separately and launder bedding frequently. Even if it is just the pillow cases, hot water washing prevents the spread of germs.
- Clean television remotes. While the sick person binges on television all day for a few days, they are also leaving germs on the remotes.
- Empty trash cans. A lot of sniffing and nose blowing goes on with flu and colds. Make sure tissues have their own trash can and the cans are emptied twice a day.

Food delivery options for busy families

Don't you hate it when your back aches, your energy is down, and what you really need is a good meal?

But who wants to cook then?

For those days, it is meal delivery to the rescue.

A host of new meal delivery services have popped up in recent years, catering to tastes from foodie to traditional. And while nothing will equal your pot roast, sometimes having a meal finished and ready to heat is just the ticket.

Rather than merely shipping canned foods and other ready-to-eat meals, meal delivery services today are offering an impressive lineup of meals to choose from as well as the flexibility of working around dietary restrictions such as paleo, vegetarian, or low carb. One such company, Freshly, has meal plans ranging from four to 12 meals per week. These meals are freshly cooked, packed in special refrigerated boxes, and arrive at the door ready to store or heat and eat.

If you live on the East or West coast, chances are you can get gourmet meals from Munchery delivered as microwavable meals.

Nationwide, people in most areas can order gourmet kits from Plated.

If you hate to shop, but don't mind cooking, lots of new choices await. Dozens of meal kit companies have popped up in recent years. They work by letting you choose the dishes you would like to cook. Then they send all the ingredients, right down to the spices, neatly sorted out. Follow the directions, and you have a home-cooked dinner in under 30 minutes. It's a fun way to share dinner with a friend, too.

There is truly a dazzling array of choices out there in this category. Fans of comfort food and southern cooking should try PeachDish.
